I. READING COMPREHENSION

teachers and everyone interested in the topic.

① How many times have you thrown away a plastic bottle? That is the question Anna Hankins, a school student and cause leader, wants people to think about the next time they buy a one-use plastic bottle. The idea started in 2012, when Anna was viewing a documentary in her environmental sciences classes regarding the issue of the impact of plastic on the environment. "I was shocked that this was something that people didn't talk about every day. I did more reading and research and then kept thinking how I could discuss it at my school." Anna created a cause and began sharing it with students,

② In 2013, Anna launched a petition to make vending machines selling bottled water in her school obsolete. In a few weeks, her petition amassed more than 4000 signatures from people all over the world. Anna and a group of students decided they should collect all the water bottles students would throw away in one week's time to see how many were used. They collected 2000 bottles from school trash bins to create a large display in the main entrance of their high school. "We want students to see all the damage caused by these vending machines. We'll make 'take-back the tap' posters that highlight the negative effects of plastic on the environment," Anna said.

3 Anna believes there are people in power who can set a great example. She said, "We want public officials to join us in the movement. If we can start with our local officials, then why can't it be everyone that's in a position of leadership? We also need to make a campaign that can be used at high schools and colleges. We're really trying to start the snowball effect nationwide."

III. LANGUAGE (6 marks)

1. Circle the right option. (3 marks)

According to the US Department of Education, more and more states prefer virtual schools to traditional ones. Nationwide, around 200,000 students are now (inserted / enrolled / included) in full-time virtual school programs where students have no face-to-face contact with teachers. Virtual schools are the fastest growing (option / alternative / choice) to traditional schools, a study has found. Supporters say such schools (make / let / allow) students to learn at their own pace. They also provide teachers who (may / should / must) not be available at traditional schools. Critics say ordinary schooling draws off resources and deprives students (about / of / from) socialization. A 2009 American analysis concluded that online students performed much (swifter / better / easier), on average, than those getting face-to-face instruction.

2. Put the bracketed words in the right tense or form. (3 marks)
