I. READING COMPREHENSION

THE TEXT

1. An art student living in Preston has raised over £21,000 for a homeless man, after she says he offered her his last £3 so that she could get a taxi home safely. Dominique Harrison-Bentzen, who studies at the University of Central Lancashire, says she had lost her bank card and needed to get home after a night out when the homeless man, known only as Robbie, offered money to help. The 22-year-old says she declined the offer.
2. Dominique was so moved by his gesture that she started a campaign to raise enough money to help him get a flat. She set up a donation facebook page and asked people to each donate £3. The campaign also involved spending the night on the street, along with supporters who had heard about her story.
3. "I was touched by such a kind gesture from a man who faces ignorance every day, so I set on a mission to find this man. The more I spoke about him, the more kind gestures I learned about him, such as him returning wallets untouched to pedestrians and offering his scarf to keep people warm. He has been homeless for 7 months through no fault of his own and needs to get back on his feet but cannot get work because he had no address. So that's when I decided to change Robbie's life and help him, as he has helped many others."
4. The campaign has received global attention, going viral on social media. Since the donation page was set up, it has frequently reported technical difficulties due to "an unusually high number of visitors." Many have tweeted their support, including celebrities.
5. After the fundraiser, which ended on Wednesday morning, Dominique posted on Facebook: "This is going to change the lives of an incredible amount of homeless people in Preston. Yes, we were cold and yes, we were hungry, but people endure that 365 days of the year, so for 24 hours we didn't complain."

Smog isn't the only kind of pollution making headlines in China. Environmental activist Deng Fei recently encouraged users of SinaWeibo, China's Twitter, to share pictures of (pollute – polluting – polluted) rivers from their hometowns. News broke on social media that not only (companies were polluting – were companies polluting – companies did pollute) the water, but were intentionally pumping wastewater (into – for – on) the ground through high-pressure pipes in order to avoid complying with regulations. According to reports, the polluted water (causes – had caused – has caused) cancer and affected the development of local children. Many regions have reported smog, and now, there are (alarmed – tragic – destroying) reports of underground water pollution. Dumping wastewater underground is an evil act; is it (some – any – no) different from killing future generations?
